Blitz uncovered

The Britannia Public House, next door to the Hackney Empire, was damaged by a bomb on the night of 23/24 September 1940, during the Blitz of the Second World War

HACKNEY Archives holds around 600 incredible images showing how the Blitz changed the face of the borough.

During the strategic bombing campaign launched against the UK by Nazi Germany in the Second World War, Council staff photographed areas shortly after they were bombed, providing a fascinating insight into the war. One of the worst nights of bombing during the incessant eight-month campaign took place on the night of 16/17 April, 1941 – 75 years ago this month. Telephone messages, which were typed up about each incident, provide a fascinating diary of wartime events, and can be seen at the Archives. For more info and images, see pages 8-9.

The management of housing stock has transferred from Hackney Homes to the Council. Staff now have a new-look uniform

Back in house

THE Council has pledged to listen more closely and react more effectively to what residents need and want after the management of its housing stock was returned in-house on 1 April.

The transfer marks the end of the Hackney Homes management contract and its successful delivery of the Decent Homes Programme over the past 10 years. The Council and Hackney Homes have been working together to ensure the smooth transition of housing services and functions.

Residents may have already noticed a new design for the housing service vans, as well as staff uniforms.

Improving the quality of services is a key part of the

“I'd like to thank Hackney Homes staff for all their hard work over the past decade and welcome them into the Council” transfer. A transformation programme is in place to tackle issues that matter to residents, including the Repairs Contact Centre, which has already seen an improvement in its telephone answering performance as a result, and the management of contracts.

The Council will also soon be undertaking a wide-ranging review of services, involving residents, to find out what is being done right and what can be done better.

Kim Wright, Group Director, Neighbourhoods and Housing, said: “I'd like to thank Hackney Homes staff for all their hard work over the past decade and welcome them into the Council as we look forward to building on their success. This transition marks an exciting new chapter for housing services in the borough and we will work to make the service even better for our residents.”

The Council and Hackney Homes jointly consulted all tenants and leaseholders on the return of housing stock using an independent research agency, with the majority of residents who responded supporting the transfer.

All the old Hackney Homes phone numbers have remained the same. However, e-mail addresses have now changed to use the ending: @hackney.gov.uk PUPILS at Northwold Primary School were staggered to discover they were in David Bowie's thoughts shortly before he died, after a signed photo donated by the singer arrived in the post.

The E5 school is raising money to build a stage and memorial garden to celebrate the musician Marc Bolan, who grew up in Stoke Newington and was a pupil there.

Michael Torry, project organiser, wrote to David Bowie last October seeking his support. He says: "Not knowing how ill he was, we asked if he would record a video message for us. Alternatively, if that was not possible, we asked if he would offer a signed photo for us to auction."

When news broke of the singer's death just a few months later in January, Michael assumed that the opportunity had passed.

He said: "But I returned home from holiday to find a signed photo! So, thank you David, wherever you are."

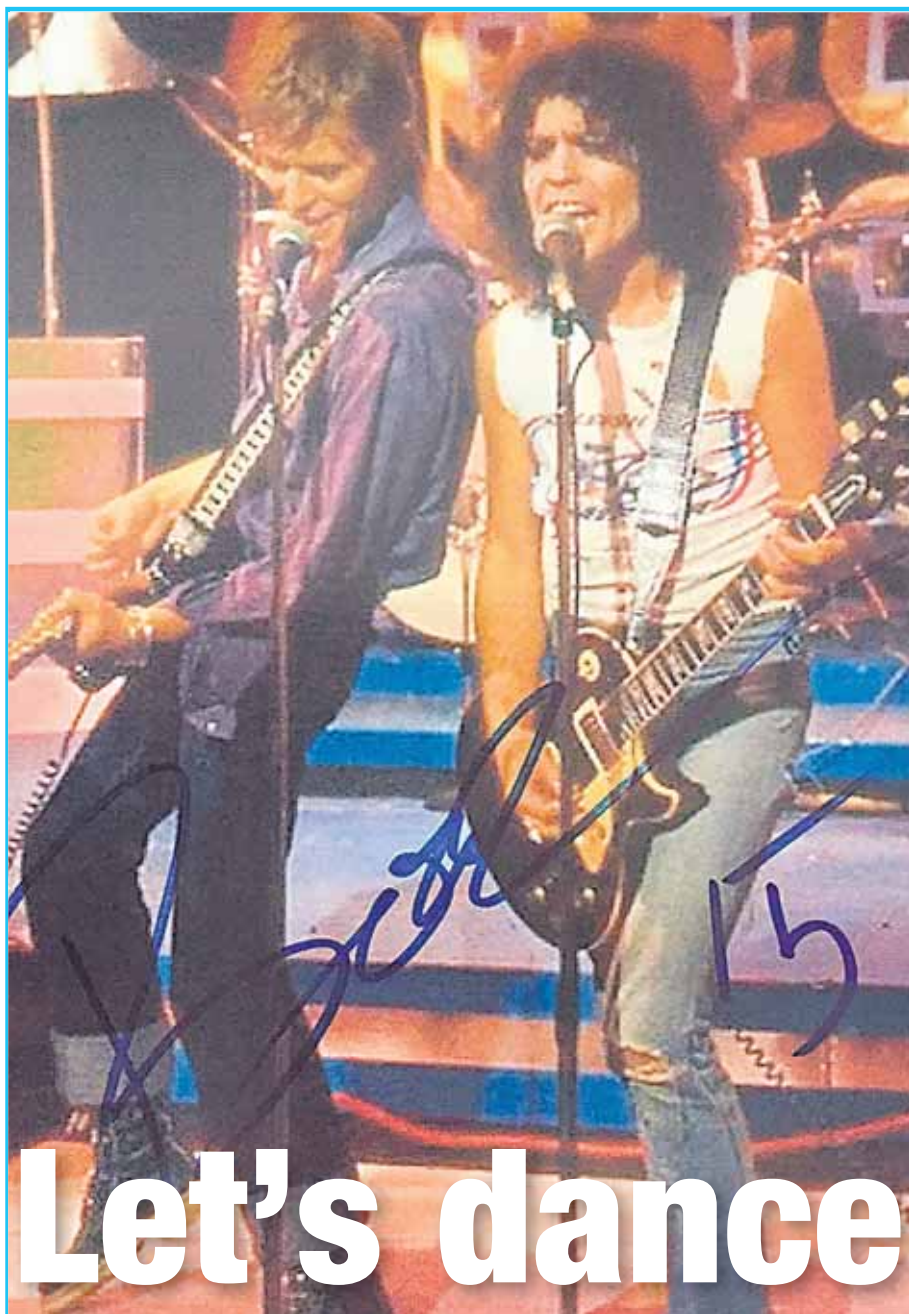

The photo shows a young Bowie performing on stage with Bolan and will add to the support already received from stars including Benedict Cumberbatch, Britt Ekland and Billy Idol, who have given recorded messages of support and donated items for auction.

Bolan's family have also lent their enthusiastic support. Michael says: "We held the 'Bolantine

Bop' event at the school in February, which was attended by members of Marc's family including his brother Harry, who also went to the school, and Marc's son Rolan who flew in from LA for it."

The next fundraising event will be held in September, and it is hoped that work will start on the new stage and memorial garden next month.

Prolific home visit library user, Kathleen McNee, remembered

THE face of the Council's home visit library service has passed away, aged 94, but staff say she will always be remembered for her 'wicked sense of humour'.

Kathleen McNee raised chuckles in a YouTube video on the service made by libraries staff when she quipped: "I like this book but there's not enough murders in it." The former Hoxton grocer, who died peacefully in Stoke Mandeville Hospital on 29 February, had been receiving home visits from the community library, based in Stoke Newington Library, for more than a decade, getting through an average 15 talking books and large print publications a month.

Daughter Marion Fountain said: "My mum always thought the world of her friends at the library service. She enjoyed reading and the service made that possible for her over many years after she was physically unable to get to the library herself."

The Council's free Community Library Service (CLS) makes monthly home visits to residents with temporary or permanent illness, frailty or special needs. Staff deliver collections of books to nurseries, day centres and residential units, and visit patients at Homerton hospital and St Joseph's Hospice on a weekly basis. The service also has a selection of VHS, DVDs, CDs and jigsaws. Chris Garnsworthy, Community Library Service Manager, said: "Kathleen was special to myself and my team, not just because of her wonderfully positive attitude to ill-health, or her wicked sense of humour, but also because she was the star of our film."

To join the CLS, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/community-library-service; or call: 020 8356 5238.

Nominate someone for an I Love Hackney Mayor's Civic Award

DO you know someone who is making Hackney a better place? Then give them the recognition they deserve with a new award.

The I Love Hackney Mayor's Civic Awards aim to recognise, celebrate and reward the brilliant people of this borough.

The Council is on the lookout for anyone who has gone above and beyond the call of duty in the community; has overcome an extraordinary difficulty; is a fabulous teacher or carer; is a person who has shown immense courage; is a tireless fundraiser or volunteer; or is an individual who has gone that extra mile to better their neighbourhood.

Nominees for the civic awards can be of any age or background. However, under 18s (both nominators and nominees) should have a parent's or guardian's permission.

All nominations will be considered by a panel of judges. Nominations close on 15 April.

To nominate an unsung hero, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/civic-awards;

or e-mail: jane.ball@hackney.gov.uk

The winners will be announced at the Council's AGM next month, where they will receive trophies and certificates. A special award is also to be given to St Joseph's Hospice in Mare Street for its work in the community.

Recycling points for small electrical items

Broken electrical items are full of valuable materials like gold and zinc. Recycling them means these valuable materials do not go to waste.

To make it easier to recycle, we have added extra drop off points for small items like phones, toasters, kettles, irons and DVD players.

For large items like TVs, fridges and washing machines you need to book a collection by visiting www.hackney.gov.uk/bulky-waste

Cables, plugs and chargers can all be recycled too

Totally on bard

Community Payback by Ali Muriel produced with Boneyard Theatre (main); Best Pies in London by Abi Zakarian produced with Youaremine (inset)

ONE thousand plays, 10 days and one medieval wagon: that's the promise of this year's Shakespeare in Shoreditch.

As part of the festival, the Council has joined forces with The Lost Picture Show to put on a series of free, outdoor film screenings across Hackney to celebrate Shakespeare's birthday.

The bard was born over 400 years ago in April and spent his early career working in Shoreditch, premiering 'Romeo and Juliet' at The Curtain theatre on Curtain Road, Shoreditch, in the 1590s.

In 2011, excavators from the Museum of London Archaeology discovered the remains of The Curtain, which is now being preserved as part of redevelopment of the site.

Watch 'Romeo + Juliet' for free as part of Shakespeare in Shoreditch

It is hoped that the free screenings, in Hackney's public squares, will introduce Shakespeare's work to a wider audience.

The free showings are: 'Shakespeare in Love' (15/1998), at Dalston Square, from 8.15pm, on 23 April; 'Romeo + Juliet' (12A/1996), at Hoxton Square, from 7pm, on 28 April; and 'Macbeth' (15/2015), at Gillett Square, Dalston, from 8.15pm on 30 April.

Tickets are also on sale for two further indoor screenings: 'Much Ado About Nothing' (PG/1993), at The Old Church, Stoke Newington, from 8.30pm on 21 April; and 'My Own Private Idaho' (15/1991), at The Courthouse Hotel, Shoreditch, from 7pm on 29 April.

The main festival, however, starts 20 April, when newly commissioned works by playwrights Lulu Raczka, David Watson, Amy Rosenthal and Charlene James will be debuted. They will be themed around storms and billed as radical reinterpretations of Shakespearian plays.

Shakespeare in Shoreditch runs from 20-30 April. General tickets cost £15.50, for which you can see two plays.

Debating the safety of Hackney

PARENTS were urged to get to know their children's 'double lives' in a bid to beat the borough's knife and gang culture at a public debate on crime and safety. Around 100 residents attended the discussions, called Hackney: A Safer Place for Everyone, on 22 March, where a series of tough topics were debated between the panel of local experts and audience.

Panellist Det Ch Supt Simon Laurence, Hackney Borough Commander, admitted that 'too many children are carrying knives', and that weapons sweeps in the borough's streets uncovered blades on a regular basis. Easy access to jobs and leisure activities are some of the ways children could successfully exit gang life, the panel and the audience suggested.

Panellist Dr Sabir Bham, Director of community group Salaam Peace, argued that positive role models were essential to countering the culture of criminality among some young people.

However, family was the key to smashing gangs, according to panellist and youth worker, Emeka Egbuonu, of the Crib Youth Project, and he urged parents to 'get to know your children; ask them questions; they could be leading double lives'.

Beacon of light for the Queen

ON 21 April, Her Majesty the Queen will be celebrating her 90th birthday.

As part of the nationwide festivities to mark the birthday of the UK's longest-reigning monarch, a series of beacons are set to be lit across the country. Hackney will be joining in by lighting a beacon on the roof of Hackney Empire, on Mare Street, at precisely 8.30pm on 21 April, and residents are invited to witness the ceremonial lighting.

Don't miss out on your chance to vote: ensure that you are registered

RESIDENTS are reminded they have until 18 April to register to vote for the Mayor of London and London Assembly elections.

On 5 May, people will go to the polls to vote for the next Mayor of London and representatives on the London Assembly. On the same date there will also be by-elections in the Hackney Downs and Stoke Newington wards (for more details see page 26).

On 23 June, the UK will also vote in a referendum on membership of the European Union.

Recent changes to how people register to vote mean that everyone must register individually, rather than the 'head of the household' registering everyone at once. The idea behind the new Individual Electoral Registration system – or IER – is to combat election fraud.

However, it means that sometimes, if local councils are unable to verify someone's identity, they will need to ask for proof of ID. This means the process can take longer, so it is vital that everyone wishing to vote in the upcoming elections and referendum ensures they are registered early.

To register, visit: www.gov.uk/register-to-vote and follow the instructions.

People who fail to register to vote, may find it difficult to apply for credit, such as a mortgage, credit card or phone contract.

Hackney Health Hubs offer free and low cost cooking and exercise classes for residents

DID YOU KNOW?

Photos: Shoreditch Trust

Free and low cost exercise and healthy cooking classes are available in Hackney Health Hubs across four estates

Hubs of activity

RESIDENTS can sink their teeth into a healthier lifestyle at a series of exercise classes and cook and eat sessions starting this month.

These free, or low cost, courses and classes are set to run until November, taking place in community spaces across the borough.

The cook and eat sessions are free to attend and most fitness classes cost a maximum of just £1. The exercise classes on offer include boxfit; pilates; legs, bums and tums; body conditioning; yoga; Zumba; circuits and chair-based exercises.

For one resident, Sherika, 29, participating in the weight management programme at Hackney Health Hubs enabled her to lose one stone and eight pounds in three months. She said: "I've struggled with my weight since I was 20. I've tried all sorts of diets over the years and nothing seemed to work.

"Planning healthy meals ahead of time was key to my success. I also found that researching healthy foods as an alternative to my usual takeaways has made a huge difference to my diet and that of my family. It was brilliant as my partner got on board – making healthy meals is now a team effort and has become part of our daily routine."

"I've struggled with my weight since I was 20... planning healthy meals ahead of time was key to my success"

The Health Hubs, which are funded by the Council and run by local charity Shoreditch Trust, are based in community centres in four estates across the borough: The Marsh Hill Centre, E9; Stamford Hill Community Centre, N16; the New Kingshold Community Centre, E9, and the Pembury Centre, E8.

Health improvement workers and health coaches, based at the hubs, are on hand to advise and support residents on a range of matters, and offer services such as NHS health checks, weight management guidance, alcohol screening and advice, stop smoking support, contraception and sexual health support, and individual health and wellbeing goals.

Steven, 35, wanted to lose weight and change his eating habits after putting on a lot of weight during a stressful time in his life. He explored how different foods impacted on health and lifestyle with his coach at a Health Hub.

Steven began cooking from scratch and kept an eating diary. He has now stopped smoking, eats fresh fruit and vegetables every day and has lost one stone in two months and – most importantly – feels good about himself and the positive direction he wants to take in life.

For Diana, 44, who started using the Health Hub services by going to pilates classes, losing weight as part of a healthier lifestyle was key.

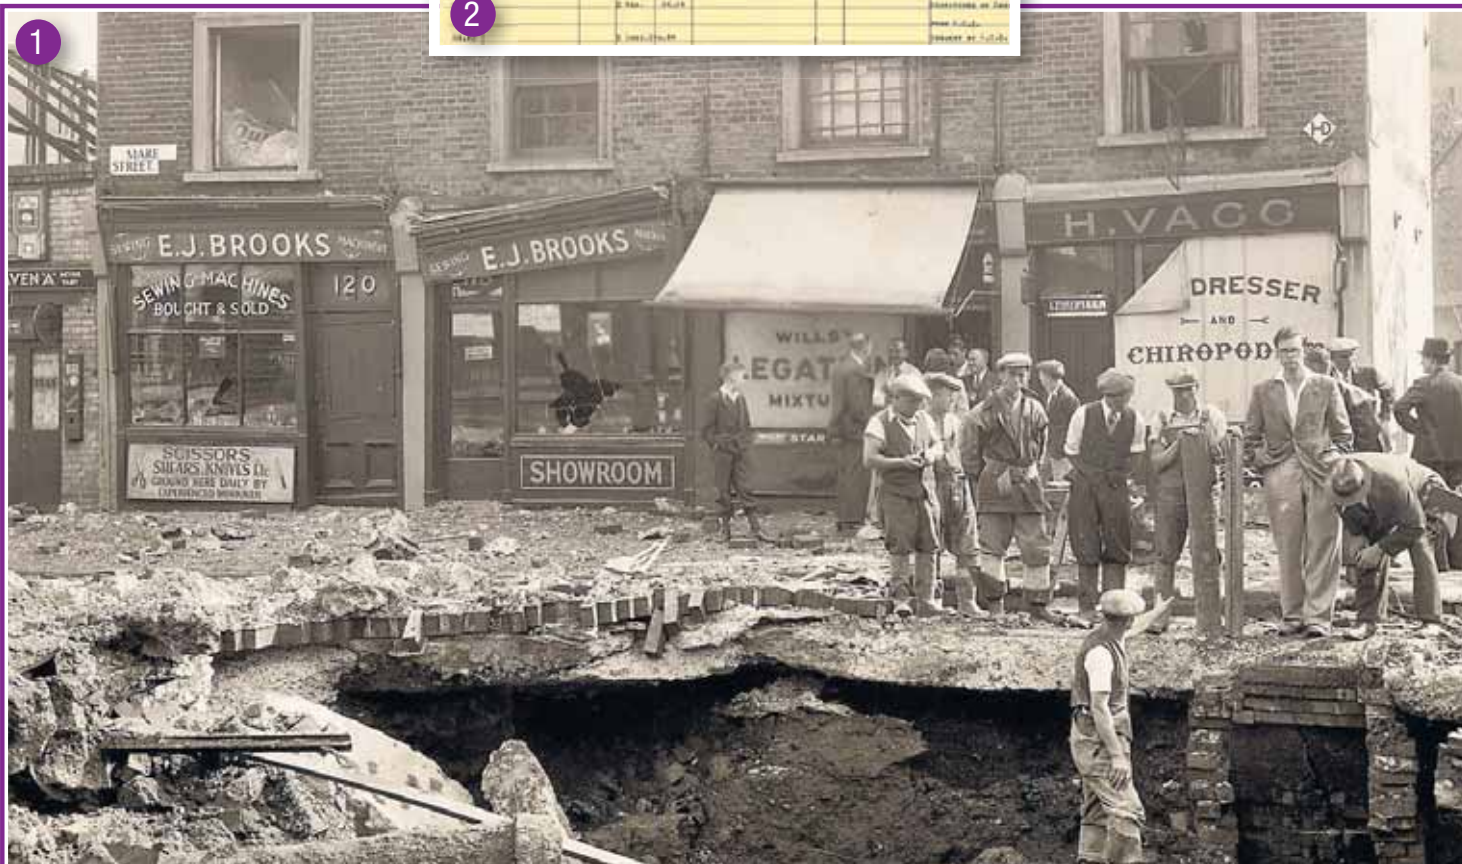

She spoke to a health coach and together they looked at different ways to alter her cooking and eating habits. She also started to do more exercise by walking in the park, as she loves the open air. Diana said that she is now feeling much better in herself and is currently planning to take up more sports classes to improve her fitness.

Hackney Archives holds 600 images showing how the Blitz changed the face of the borough

By Sian Mogridge

THE sustained and strategic bombing campaign against the UK by Nazi Germany during the Second World War was known as the Blitz.

It began on the afternoon of 7 September 1940, when Luftwaffe aircraft filled the skies, dropping explosives on East London. Around 450 people died and 1,300 were seriously injured. In the first 30 days of the Blitz alone, almost 6,000 people were killed across the capital, and twice as many badly injured.

The Blitz is remembered in many different ways, and Hackney Archives holds information from council records of the time.

“One of the things that Hackney Council chose to do was to photograph areas shortly after they were bombed”

In 1940, there were three councils in the area: Shoreditch, Stoke Newington and Hackney. This article focuses on the Hackney records, which are in the best condition and give the most information.

Hackney Council chose to photograph areas shortly after they were bombed. This has left the Archives with a collection of about 600 images showing how the Blitz changed the face of the borough.

Before the war started, the Government was aware that air raids would be a problem, and an organisation, Air Raid Precautions (ARP), was set up to protect civilians and enforce the black-out. Once the bombs started falling they dealt with minor fires, kept people away from unexploded bombs, carried out first aid, rescued people from damaged buildings, and found accommodation for the homeless.

The vast majority were paid volunteers, with a full time day job, and they had to be a local person because they needed to know the streets and people for which they were responsible.

Another task of ARP Wardens was keeping the local control centre informed and requesting back up from the emergency services. Some of the telephone message forms, noting each call received or sent by Hackney's ARP Control Centre, have also survived. These were typed up after each bombing incident and provide a diary of wartime events.

One example, 75 years ago this month, was on Casterton Street, which ran behind Hackney Town Hall, between Hillman Street and the railway line. The Council's Service Centre now stands on the site.

Casterton Street was hit by a high explosive bomb in the early hours of 17 April 1941. Photo 10, taken from the top of the Town Hall, shows the extent of the damage. The bomb fell into the area covered by ARP Warden's Post 23, and the first telephone call received by the Control Centre was a request for an ambulance at 3.35am.

Reeves & Sons building on Ashwin Street, Dalston, damaged on the night of the 1/2 November 1940;

From here you can watch what happened in the incident diary. Within five minutes another ambulance, a stretcher party and rescue party had been requested. At 3.39am it was reported that there were many casualties.

Over the next hour several more rescue parties and ambulances were called for, and at 4.15am the mortuary van. An urgent request for a doctor was made at 4.51am. At 5.52am a mobile canteen for 100 people was requested, an indication of how many must have been working on the site.

Damages to utilities also needed to be attended to, and at 6.09am Post 23 asked for a turncock because of a damaged water main. The work, presumably looking through the rubble for trapped people and for bodies, continued all day.

A doctor remained on site, and there were further requests for the mortuary van. At 4.10pm, another mobile canteen was requested, for 50 men. The incident officer finally asked if he might dismiss the work parties at 8pm, but some work continued the following day.

The Casterton Street bombing was a large incident, but by no means unique, nor was it the only one that night. By looking at the telephone message forms you see what else was going on in Hackney.

The Control Centre was receiving telephone calls and dispatching emergency parties to at least four other incidents, all happening at once.

Information coming in included reports of unexploded bombs and anti-aircraft shells and two gas leaks.

The night of 16/17 April, 1941 was a very bad one for London as a whole. Other nights would have been quieter. However the Incident Diaries and telephone message forms give some idea of the scale of what was happening and the sort of thing that, by spring 1941, Londoners would have been used to. They also give a sense of the commitment and determination of the ARP wardens, rescue parties, ambulance crews, and telephonists at the control centres. These people and others, many of them volunteers, saved lives and kept London going throughout the daily bombing raids of the Blitz, which continued until the summer of 1941.

Funmbi guy

By Harriet Worsley

I WAS always funny as a kid, but I never thought about making comedy into a job until

I got my GCSE results back and realised I was going to have to think creatively," says Funmbi Omotayo. Adding: "I think I got two in total, maths and English. So I can talk, and I can count, but not much else!"

The comedian, whose solo show 'Legal Immigrant' has been winning rave reviews, was born and raised in Hackney. When he brought down the house on BBC One's John Bishop Show last year, the borough provided much of the material. Talking about how much the area has changed, for example, he quipped: "I came out of the station and this white guy offered me drugs ... I got really offended at first cos I was like: look at these white boys coming into our neighbourhoods, taking our jobs."

The borough is central to his performances too, which tell the true story of the young Funmbi leaving East London for Lagos at the age of 10 and trying desperately to fit in there, before returning to Hackney six years later and finding himself a fish out of water once again.

He says: "Hackney was such an interesting place to grow up. I went to Orchard Primary School and we were a typical mixed, minority neighbourhood: black kids, white working class kids, Asian kids. We were all part of the same team."

When his GCSE results came through, he realised he was at a crossroads.

"I had to make a choice. I could go down the wrong road, because there was a lot of that about, or I could do something positive," he explains.

“ Hackney was such an interesting place to grow up... we were all part of the same team ”

Comedy was his route to doing something good. "It was really tough. I was working as a porter in Harrods all morning, pulling palettes, then going to drama school in the evenings. I was exhausted. They asked me to leave after the first year," he says.

That could have been the end of his confidence and his career, had his sister not arranged for him to have a slot at a stand-up night under a wine bar in Soho. He explains: "I didn't think I could do stand-up, and the nerves nearly killed me. I had a stomach ache. I wanted to pass out. But I went out there and did my five minutes."

And it paid off, he says: "I became part of the 'urban scene' and did pretty well. My material was very Nigerian and I developed a really strong following. I was playing Hackney Empire to an audience of 1,000. I felt like a rock star."

But, still, something was missing. "My mum said I had to stop dividing audiences into black and white," explains Funmbi. Adding: "There was only so far I could take my niche if I didn't write for wider audiences."

The Olympics was happening at the time, his hometown of Hackney was one of the 2012 host boroughs, and, Funmbi recalls: "It was really bringing people together, across cultures."

So he scrapped all his material and started from scratch, performing new work at tiny venues. Funmbi continues: "It wasn't easy. I had to play to rooms of five people all over again. And now, suddenly, it would be predominantly white audiences, in middle class neighbourhoods. There were moments when I thought I would quit, but I knew I had to give it a proper go."

Today, his shows are packed with material that is current, even political. He talks about how London neighbourhoods like Hackney are changing, and how race continues to affect people's experiences in this country. (From his John Bishop show: "My full name on my driver's licence is Oluwafunmbi Adedeji Omotayo. I'm one of the only black guys in London who looks forward to being stopped by the police.")

In 2012, he won the prestigious Leicester Square New Act of the Year award and became joint winner of Amused Moose's Laugh Off Competition. More TV appearances are coming soon and right now he is working on a pilot for BBC Three and developing another show. Time Out magazine recently said of him, 'soon, he could be playing to thousands'. Let's just hope he never forgets where he came from.

Restoring Abney Park

Works are already underway in restoring and repairing Abney Park Cemetery – including the chapel (above)

ABNEY Park Chapel is set to be brought back into use thanks to a collaboration between the Council and Historic England.

The magnificent 19th century Gothic mortuary, in Abney Park Cemetery, will undergo works to stabilise its roof, as well as other repairs to the Grade II listed building to ensure its safety and preservation.

The chapel, which sits in the centre of the nonconformist cemetery, was designed by architect William Hosking, the first professor in architecture and civil engineering at King's College London.

Securing loose masonry, replacing missing architectural detail, and reformation of gutters and downpipes are just some of the elements of the work currently underway.

Fire and vandalism gutted the chapel – currently on Historic England's 'at risk' register – in the 1980s, and the Council boarded off the building in 2012 to protect the public.

Now the Council and Historic England are joint-funding repairs to the

“We are delighted to be supporting the repair of the mortuary chapel, an imposing Gothic revival building”

Victorian chapel, one of a series of planned projects for the cemetery.

The restoration of the main listed gates at Stoke Newington High Street and gates at Stoke Newington Church Street are already underway. Repairs are also due to begin this month to the boundary wall, children's garden and paths.

Rebecca Barrett, Heritage at Risk Principal for Historic England, said: “We are delighted to be supporting the repair of the mortuary chapel, an imposing Gothic revival building which sits at the heart of Abney Park Cemetery.

“With these stabilising works we are one step closer to removing it from the Heritage at Risk Register.”

A spokesperson for Abney Park Trust added: “The trust is delighted that the chapel will be made safe.”

The work is being spearheaded by the Abney Park Development Board, made up of the Council, Abney Park Trust, Abney Park User Group, London Wildlife Trust and Historic England.

For more information on the works, visit: www.abneypark.org

News in brief

£40k grant to Daubeney Fields

A POPULAR local play area has been awarded £40,000 to help transform it into an exciting space for children. The money from The Veolia Environmental Trust will be used to buy new play equipment for Daubeney Fields, which is designed to use its rolling landscape for imaginative and accessible play.

The design will be developed in consultation with park user group Daubeney Fields Forever.

Celebrate Real Nappy Week

THE Real Nappies for London network is urging parents to switch to using reusable diapers to help the environment and their pockets.

The 20th anniversary of Real Nappy Week takes place from 18 to 24 April, and there are many events taking place across Hackney to encourage parents to make the change, including a nappy swap, fashion show, and online competitions.

All Hackney parents are entitled to a £54 voucher per child to use towards the cost of real nappies.

Hackney City Farm donates 30 years of records to Hackney Archives

HACKNEY City Farm has donated 30 years of records to Hackney Archives and also launched a new accessible website.

The project, which was launched on 7 April, has seen 12 crates of original artefacts sorted out and copied. The items include photographs, hand drawn posters and a film from the 1980s, all of which depict the story of the creation of the farm.

The records will be held at Dalston CLR James Library and the new website will give people access to the collection. It also has a map for visitors and explains the fascinating role the farm has played in local life over the years.

Chris Pounds, Farm Manager, said: “This has been an incredible project. Thanks to the hard work of volunteers, Double Sided and Hackney Archives, we have secured the farm's unique story. This Heritage Lottery Fund supported project continues, not only for future generations, but also for the present.

Additions to the collection are welcomed.”

Hackney City Farm was set up by volunteers in 1984 to provide a community learning and leisure resource based around farming and the countryside.

HMS Pinafore

27 April-1 May, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, E8 1EJ

LOWLY seaman Ralph Rackstraw is in love with the captain's daughter Josephine. Josephine loves him too but – alas – she is betrothed to The Right Honourable Sir Joseph Porter. Sound complicated? Wait till you hear that Josephine is played by a man.

Sasha Regan's production of Gilbert and Sullivan's opera HMS

Pinafore is back at the Hackney Empire. The all-male cast she brings to the show is inspired, in part, by her own childhood experiences of performing their work at a single-sex school.

This production, however, is far from immature. HMS Pinafore's infectious tunes and beautifully constructed libretto are rendered fresh, fast, inventive and fun. Catch it before it sets sail again.

68* Years

A NEW play at the Arcola is giving a Palestinian actress her London theatre debut, without her ever leaving her home country.

Maisa Adb Elhadi will appear alongside West End veteran Peter Polycarpou in 'Scenes From 68* Years', a play by Hannah Khalil.

A graduate of the Royal Court's young writers programme, Khalil has created a play that travels across countries and eras, from the establishment of Israel in 1948 to the present day, to examine what conflict does to domestic life. Abd Alhadi, named best actress at the 2011 Dubai Film Festival, plays a young Palestinian graffiti artist. But how will she appear on stage in Dalston each night, from over 2,000 miles away? Via the magic of Skype. If you want to know more, Hackney Today has a pair of tickets to give away...

Scenes from 68* Years is on at The Arcola from 6 April to 30 April. Tickets are £17 with £14 concessions available. For more information visit: www.arcolatheatre.com

RUFF

14-16 April, Silk Street theatre, Barbican, EC2Y 8DS

A HACKNEY theatre collective is storming the stage at the Barbican this month, with video, New York satire and a virtual back up band.

In Company Collective is bringing the cult New York performance troupe Split Britches to the Silk Street theatre to perform their new show 'Ruff'. Founded by Peggy Shaw and Lois Weaver, Split Britches has been going since 1980, presenting their characteristic dry humour to the queer art scene.

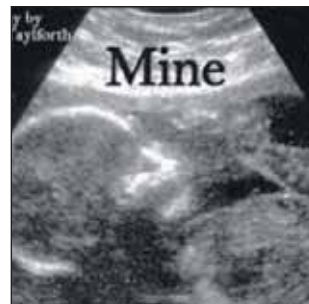

This time, Shaw turns her deadpan style on some dark material – the stroke she suffered in 2011. It's just her on stage, delivering a freewheeling monologue about its terrifying effects, but also the friends, family and performers who have kept her afloat.

Expect crooning, green screens, film, the 'Hokey Cokey' reimagined for stroke symptoms and yes – that tantalising prospect of a virtual back up back...

Split Britches' show Ruff runs from 14 to 16 April at the Silk Street theatre, Barbican. Performances start at 7.45pm and tickets cost £16. For more information visit: www.barbican.org.uk can't have a child right now..." 'Mine' explores three couples' routes to pregnancy, and questions whether they have the right to claim ownership of that child and indeed each other. £12/10 conc. PREVIEW*Knife Edge*18 May-12 June, POND, Dalston, 3 Gillett St, N16 8JH

LAUGH, think and eat. That's the promise being made by the latest production staged by local theatre company The Big House. 'Knife Edge' is a play about fear, food and family that begins with a murder and ends with a feast. So where better to stage its world premiere than in a restaurant? Accordingly, the audience is invited to POND, a Hawaiian eatery in Dalston, to take in this immersive performance about a girl with no name, and the darkly comic world in which she lives.

The Big House stages high profile productions featuring young performers who have been in care. Previous productions have won awards for the way in which they take the audiences on emotional journeys, inspired by the true-life stories of its cast. This latest production promises to be another stellar example. Knife Edge is running at POND Dalston from 18 May to 12 June. Last year's Bike Around The Borough saw 873 schoolchildren, staff and parents taking part in the mass cycle ride

Back in the saddle

PUPILS, parents and teachers are being encouraged to take part in the annual Bike Around The Borough event, in a world record breaking attempt to get the most riders in a 'bike bus'.

The mass ride, set to take place on 6 July, will provide a chance for youngsters to practise skills learned at cycle training, and to raise awareness of how easy it is to travel around the borough by bike.

Last year, over 870 cyclists, from almost 40 primary and secondary schools across Hackney, got together to create the second largest 'bike bus' in the world. This is when a group of cyclists ride along a set route, picking up people as they go.

This year's route will cover eight miles around Hackney, taking in many local landmarks on the way. A lunchtime celebration event is also set to take place in Haggerston Park.

Pop-up 'motivation stations' will be positioned along the route to help create a festival atmosphere.

MORE INFO

All Hackney primary and secondary schools are encouraged to get involved. Register by 21 April, by e-mailing: sta@hackney.gov.uk

News in brief

Children celebrate Purim

PUPILS from special educational needs school, Side by Side, put on colourful fancy dress to mark the Jewish festival of Purim.

Local charity Shabaton L'menucha Trust helped organise the event for over 60 people with special needs within the Stamford Hill community, at Satmar Hall, N16.

Children took part in singing and dancing and enjoyed entertainment provided by a clown and a magician.

A mother of one of the children who attended, said: "This was the first time in 14 years that our family looked forward to Purim. This event was a great opportunity for our child to enjoy Purim with his friends."

Top award for Clapton Girls'

CLAPTON Girls' Academy has received a national award for its work to improve the 'well-being, resilience and self-esteem' of pupils who are more likely to underachieve.

The Quality Mark Award recognises the work being done by the school to improve progress in reading, writing and maths for all pupils, particularly those with special educational needs or disabilities.

The award was developed by education charity Achievement for All, which offers support programmes to schools to help improve outcomes for the lowest achieving 20 per cent of students.

Anna Feltham, Associate Headteacher at Clapton Girls' Academy, said: "The programme has helped us ensure an even sharper focus on attainment and process for all students."

Hackney Community College set to merge with Tower Hamlets College

HACKNEY Community College (HCC) has announced that it is to merge with neighbouring Tower Hamlets College (THC) creating a 'larger and more sustainable' further education college for 17,000 East London students.

While both institutions will keep their names, courses and campuses – HCC is in Falkirk Street, Hoxton, and THC in Poplar and Stepney – they will officially merge on 1 August. It is hoped that the new organisation will provide both colleges with more financial stability, after cuts saw HCC lose nearly a third of its £10million budget for adult education last year.

HCC Principal, Ian Ashman, who has led the college rated by Ofsted as 'good' with some 'outstanding' features for a decade, will step down when the merger takes place in the summer.

THC Principal, Gerry McDonald, will take on the position of Chief Executive of the new organisation. It has also been announced that the existing Chairs of Governors will stand down from the end of July.

The current Chairs of Governors, THC's Professor Martin Earwicker and HCC's Tom Mautner JP issued a joint statement, asserting that: "This merger, a partnership of equals, brings together two very strong organisations, which play vital roles in their communities and the wider region.

"While we maintain the local names and identities of Hackney Community College and Tower Hamlets College, the merger will create a much stronger organisation, which will continue to meet the skill needs of local people, employers and our communities for the foreseeable future."

The borough became a giant playground last month as part of the Playful Hackney festival

THE borough became one huge playground for a weekend, as a festival brought children together to celebrate its outdoor spaces.

Hosted by charity Hackney Play Association and social enterprise Outdoor People, the event was part of the Find Your London Festival, which celebrated the capital's free outdoor spaces from 18 to 20 March. Sessions took place at two of the borough's longest-standing adventure playgrounds, Homerton Grove, E9, and Shakespeare Walk, N16, where children enjoyed den building, gardening, woodwork and toasting marshmallows around a fire. Hackney Play Director, Nicola Butler, said: “It was brilliant seeing lots of new families coming along, which is exactly what we were hoping for. Hackney is lucky to have seven adventure playgrounds, offering children fantastic opportunities to play freely, let off steam and make new friends.”

“ Hackney is lucky to have seven adventure playgrounds ”

Other festival highlights included guided walks through Hackney's urban backwaters and an event on Winston Road in Stoke Newington, which is regularly closed to traffic so that children can play freely for a few hours. Residents welcomed families from across London to play in the road, and gave advice on how to set up similar schemes, known as ‘play streets’. The documentary film ‘Project Wild Thing’, was also screened for free.

Outdoor People founder Cath Prisk, said: “It was great to screen this fantastic film at Homerton Adventure Playground, where we had around 30 children and families coming to watch it, discuss how to get kids playing outdoors more, and afterwards we all played in the playground in the dark.”

Getting fit for Sport Relief

MORE than 200 Hackney students took part in a fun fitness challenge at Clissold Leisure Centre, all in the name of charity.

Spinning, rowing and various boxing activities were part of the six-exercise circuit fundraiser – hosted by the Barry McGuigan Boxing Academy and supported by the Council's leisure partner GLL – which saw Stoke Newington School pupils set and attempt to smash their personal fitness goals.

All the money raised from the event, on 18 March, will go to Sport Relief.

Junior road safety campaigners

HOW do we stop motorists parking dangerously, selfishly and illegally in and around school gates during the morning and afternoon school-runs?

That was the challenge set to the 48 junior road safety officers from 15 Hackney primary schools at the first School Keep Clear Campaign conference, in the Tomlinson Centre, Queensbridge Road, last month. The pupils learned useful information on how to help change drivers' attitudes and behaviour, which they will take back and use to tackle the problem outside their schools, by formulating their own campaigns.

Young East Londoners learn to get creative in the fashion industry

A NEW employability programme for East Londoners is helping to break down the barriers faced by young people who want careers in the fashion industry.

Twelve young adults spent six weeks constructing a mini-collection using a variety of industry techniques including pattern cutting, laser cutting, distressing, vinyl printing and spraying. This was followed by four weeks of work experience with some of the industry's biggest names.

The project began with a behind-the-scenes look at London Fashion Week, where the young people took part in two weeks of industry specific training.

As well as developing their creative skills, the group worked with Hackney charities A New Direction and Create to gain employment in the industry.

The project culminated with an event that celebrated the launch of the mini-collections at Machines Rooms, E2, on 24 March. The young people curated the launch collection themselves.

Louise Barnell, Producer at Create Jobs, said: “The group have shown huge commitment. In just six weeks they've made three garments each, produced a film, look book, and fashion presentation.”

These stories were compiled with the help of Homerton University Hospital, City & Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group & East London NHS Foundation Trust

A GROUP of over 30 people raised nearly £11,500 by fire-walking their way over hot coals at St Joseph's Hospice.

The event saw teams from local businesses, people taking part in memory of a loved one, hospice staff and volunteers walking barefoot on steaming hot embers at a temperature of 669 degrees Celsius.

First-time firewalker Rhasan Brunner, said: "Who knew fire walking could be so much fun. Not just the walk, but the pre-walk motivational training was superb."

"I have lived in Hackney for a long time and I know St Joseph's Hospice has supported many of its residents over the years. It was an amazing evening."

Joe Jackson, a local firefighter, added: "With some intense training the whole team of firewalkers managed the seemingly impossible, overcoming our doubts and fears to walk on fire and successfully raise a healthy amount of money for St Joseph's."

"My relationship with fire is a close one, but I never thought I would walk

Homerton hospital awarded £31k for its maternity unit

HOMERTON hospital's maternity department has been awarded £31,000 by the Department of Health. The money will be spent on neonatal resuscitation equipment and sonic-aids, which are used to listen to the baby's heart beat during labour.

Joan Douglas, Homerton's Head of Midwifery, said: "We are delighted to receive this funding which will be used to further improve the safety of new-born babies in the birth centre, at the same time as improving the experience of birth for mothers."

"Wall mounted resuscitaires will now be available in every room meaning immediate access to this equipment when necessary."

Free healthy lifestyle event

TYSSEN Community School, N16, is on a mission to get Hackney healthy and it is holding a healthy lifestyle event to get things – and people – moving.

On 20 April, from 3.15pm to 5pm, the school on Oldhill Street will host a wide range of health professionals and organisations, showcasing different aspects of healthy living and how the community can access related facilities and workshops across Hackney.

The free event will feature mental and physical health organisations like the Council's public health team, Change4Life, Hackney Health Hub and Leap. There will be opportunities to ask questions, seek advice, find out about future activities and facilities and complete referral forms to access medical help.

For more info, visit: www.tysen.hackney.sch.uk; or call: 020 8806 4130.

Museum showcases immersive art for disabled access day

PAINTINGS, jewellery and performances were among the exhibits in an immersive art showcase to celebrate Disabled Access Day at Hackney Museum.

The event, held on 12 March, was the culmination of a series of workshops run at the museum by charity Advance, which supports people with learning difficulties and mental health conditions. The programme, called Our Stories, involved a group of the charity's users enrolling in creative sessions and developing their own artistic responses to objects in the museum.

The works of art, themed around the subjects of migration, home and community, were exhibited in a pop-up show, after which members of the public were invited to take part in a screen printing workshop.

Andy Critchley, Advance's Community Aspirations Manager, said: "Many of our customers have learning disabilities or mental health conditions, and some people are non-verbal or sight impaired. That's why our art, music and drama groups are designed to support our customers to express themselves."

To find out more about the 'Our Stories' sessions at Hackney Museum, e-mail: hmuseum@hackney.gov.uk

To find out more about Advance's workshops across the borough visit www.advanceuk.org; or call: 033 3012 4307.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sade Etti.

SWEDISH chef Sara from Cooper & Wolf describes pytt i panna ('bits in a pan') as a good hangover cure, akin to a full English breakfast.

Ingredients

- 1/4 white onion, roughly chopped
- 1 tsp dried rosemary
- 1 cup diced bacon
- 3-4 medium potatoes diced
- 1 large organic egg
- 1 tsp paprika powder
- 1 tbsp fresh chives
- 4 tbsp vegetable oil
- 1 knob of butter
- salt and pepper to taste
- pickled beetroot and cucumber (optional).

Fry everything until the potato is soft and bacon slightly crispy

- In a separate pan, fry the egg 'sunny side up'
- Place the egg on top of the pytt i panna, and sprinkle with chopped chives
- At Cooper & Wolf they serve the dish with pickled beetroot and homemade pressed pickled cucumber.

Method

- Boil the potatoes for 20-25 minutes, until soft. Leave to cool and dice them
- Put a knob of butter and a little vegetable oil in a large frying pan. Add the chopped onion and rosemary and fry for a couple of minutes till soft
- Add the bacon and fry until cooked. Add the diced potato, paprika powder, salt & pepper.

Cooper & Wolf is a family run cafe/restaurant, offering breakfast and lunch seven days a week, in the heart of Clapton, overlooking Millfields Park.

Dishes include Swedish meatballs, fresh fish and vegetarian options. Using quality seasonal produce, they pickle their own herring and make their gravlax in-house.

Shakespeare Walk & Butterfield Green traffic improvements

WORK is set to begin on creating new traffic calming measures for Shakespeare Walk and Butterfield Green.

In November, residents were asked to comment on proposals to improve pedestrian access and traffic calming on Shakespeare Walk, between Butterfield Green Community Orchard, Shakespeare Walk Adventure Playground Association and the multi-use games area children's playground.

Feedback showed residents to be fully supportive of the proposed improvements which will create new paving and kerb-buildouts for a raised flat top hump, a place crossing, and new double yellow lines around the crossing to provide better visibility for pedestrians and motorists.

Improving road safety and managing the borough's road network as effectively and efficiently as possible are key transport priorities for the Council.

To achieve this, it has developed a programme of schemes to provide a safer, more accessible environment for road users and to reduce the impact of traffic on residents.

Work on the Shakespeare Walk and Butterfield Green traffic calming improvements will begin in May and last approximately four weeks.
